

REV. DAVID KECK

Ph.D.

David Keck is a thoughtful educator, chaplain, and scholar, and is known for fostering meaningful conversations around faith, ethics, leadership, and community within higher education and aviation environments.

HOBBIES

Playing the Harp, Watching Football

FAMILY

Married with 2 children

HOME CHURCH

Central Florida Presbytery

LIFE VERSE

"Rejoice with those who rejoice, weep with those who weep."

Romans 12:15

PROFESSIONAL BIO

Re. David Keck serves as Chaplain at Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University, where he supports students, faculty, and staff through spiritual care, mentoring, teaching, and interfaith engagement. In addition to his chaplaincy work, he teaches courses focused on religion, ethics, conflict, and peace, helping foster thoughtful dialogue around faith, leadership, and community within higher education and aviation environments.

Dr. Keck has academic interests spanning theology, ethics, congregational dynamics, and the relationship between religion, culture, and technology. An ordained Presbyterian minister, he has also served as a pastor, speaker, and author, contributing books and writings focused on faith, leadership, and spiritual formation. Known for his thoughtful and relational leadership style, he is passionate about helping students and communities engage life's deeper questions with curiosity, compassion, and intellectual rigor.

UNIVERSITIES ATTENDED

Harvard University

Ph.D. Doctor of Philosophy in History

M.A. Master of Arts in History

Duke University

M.Div. Master of Divinity in Divinity

Yale University

B.A. History

AREA OF EXPERTISE

Collegiate / Campus Ministry, Discipleship, Serving in Academia